	(1, 5) (2023)	face/longline fisheries			assessed as N/C2. This is because the Marine Fisheries Research and Development Division of the Department of Fisheries in Thailand has been conducting data collection on coastal tuna and tuna-like species through incidental sampling from purse seiners at the port on a monthly basis. However, this sampling method has certain limitations. For instance, there may be instances where no purse seiners catch tuna or tuna-like species during the data collection period, or no purse seiners are present at all during that time. Additionally, monsoon winds along the Andaman Sea coast can prevent fishing vessels from operating throughout the year. Furthermore, the previous measurement of tuna and tuna-like species lengths was conducted by a few official from the Marine Fisheries Research and Development Division. This limited approach resulted in a small amount of data being collected compared to the total number of purse seiners catching aquatic animals. Consequently, there is insufficient information on the length of tuna and tuna-like species to fully comply with the requirements of the IOTC conservation and management measures. Despite this, Thailand will continue conducting monthly surveys on fish landings from purse seine vessels operating in Thai waters within the IOTC's area of competence. These surveys have been part of our national fisheries data collection program since 2016. Moreover, Thailand has initiated a trial project aimed at improving the size frequency reports submitted to the IOTC. This project will involve an enumerator who will exclusively collect data on IOTC species from purse seine vessels landing at the main fishing ports along the Andaman Sea coast. The enumerator will primarily collect fish length data and, where possible, other biological data. The project is expected to run from 1st January 2025 to 31st December 2026. We hope this project will help us fully comply with the IOTC CMM.
